Perhaps the biggest myth about flat-panel TVs is that they save space. Sure, you can hang them on the wall and bury interconnects behind the drywall, but you're still left with a credenza housing the rest of your gear. When all is said and done, you may as well mount your plasma on floorstanding furniture—any way it goes, your entertainment system is still hogging a lot of carpet.

Or you could regain that floor space by using Vantage Point's sleek new ēvo system. With four inches of hollow space behind its 16-by-16-inch wood veneer panels, and a bounty of interchangeable accessories including TV mounts and gear shelving, ēvo offers a beautiful solution to managing cables and cleaning up the clutter that flat-panel monitors were supposed to eliminate to begin with. Available in configurations ranging from 3-by-1 to 4-by-6 panels, in a variety of luxurious finishes (562.946.1718 or vanptc.com).—D.B.
